

Clear Creek Park Continues to Grow!

Laramie County is proud to announce the planting of 100 new trees at Clear Creek Park, located at 251 Southwest Drive, through a partnership with the Wyoming State Forestry Division's Urban & Community Forestry Program. This project was made possible through funding from the Inflation Reduction Act (IRA), provided by the United States Forest Service.

The new trees represent a diverse mix of species, helping create a healthier and more resilient urban forest. Increasing tree diversity strengthens the park's ability to withstand future threats from insects, diseases, and changing environmental conditions while providing lasting shade, beauty, and wildlife habitat for generations to come.

As part of the project, several aging trees that had become hazardous were also removed, improving public safety while making room for healthy new growth.

These improvements are part of the continued enhancement of Clear Creek Park and complement recent upgrades, including expanded parking, updated playgrounds, picnic shelters, gathering spaces, walking paths, disc golf, outdoor cornhole boards, bike amenities, sports courts, and more.

Laramie County also extends its sincere appreciation to the Wyoming State Forestry Division for its partnership and support in making this project possible. We also thank the dedicated Laramie County staff whose hard work, planning, and ongoing care have helped to bring these improvements to life. Their commitment continues to make Clear Creek Park a welcoming destination where families, neighbors, and visitors can gather, recreate, and enjoy the outdoors.

Be sure to visit Clear Creek Park to see the new trees and watch them grow alongside one of Laramie County's favorite parks. Whether you're taking a walk, playing a round of disc golf or cornhole, watching children enjoy the playground, or simply relaxing beneath the growing canopy, Clear Creek Park continues to be one of Laramie County's premier places to connect with nature and each other.
